I will truly miss my friend who taught me so many life lessons and gave of himself and took care of so many never looking for anything in return. His gentle nature, kind words, and a heart of gold will forever be with us. For Bob, with a Song in His Heart A heart as vast as summer skies, A soul that soared where eagles rise. Bob King, a friend, a steadfast guide, Whose faith and love forever abide. With rod in hand, and hunter's glee, He found solace in nature's sea. Illness's storm, he faced with might, A warrior's spirit, shining bright. He cared for others, selfless and true, A helping hand, a heart that knew. And in the sermon, a cherished sound, "The birds are still singing," peace profound. Now he's joined the chorus, sweet and clear, A melody of love, without a fear. Though absent from us, his spirit's near, A guiding star, forever dear. Let's celebrate a life well-lived, A legacy of kindness, deeply carved. Bob King, our friend, forever bright, Singing his song in eternal light.

Sweet Bob will be missed by many. Bob gave the best hugs to everyone walking out the door after Sunday service— and of course all the kids knew he would have them a piece of chewing gum. Bob to make sure everyone left knowing they were loved. The last thing Bob told me was “I’ll pray for you, and you pray for me” in regards to an upcoming drs appointment we had last week. He loved life and loved people.
